

KARTHIGASEN GOVENDER (26) of Durban, who outshone all in this year's University of Natal final-year LIB results on the Durban campus, is congratulated by his wife, Suria, and year-old son Yeshindra. Now he is celebrating his success but there's no rush for Latin.

Top lawman has something to shout about

Daily News Reporter

LUCK and a lot of hard work is the formula of Karthigasen Govender (26), who outshone all others in this year's University of Natal final-year LIB results on the Durban campus.

Karthigasen said yesterday that he intended having a drop of champagne to celebrate the news. He lives with his drama-lecturer wife Suria and toddler Yeshindra in a central Durban flat.

Educated at a private school in Essex, Britain, he attended Queen Mary College at the University of London, where he qualified as a barrister. He returned to join his family in Durban, where his father owns a store, and to qualify as a lawyer here.

The only thing stopping him now is the recently imposed advanced Latin requirement, which it appears he will have to complete at some stage.

But there's no rush. Karthigasen has been asked in the meantime to join the University of Natal's Department of Public Law as a temporary junior lecturer.